REPORT

The judge is grateful to all the authors who worked and sent their studies.

A total of 20 studies by 14 authors from 9 countries were published in the thematic section. In a number of studies the theme is realized, but no more...

The number of marked works in the competition could have been greater if some authors had devoted more time to their compositions in search of successful realization of the conceived ideas. Put more humor and love into your future studies and you are sure to achieve something greater!..

The level of the tournament is reflected by the studies in the award.

The excessive tension of the initial position is redeemed by good logic, accurate play of pieces and the most beautiful thematic choice of the tournament - 7.Rg2!/7.Ng2? The inventive duel between the sides ends with a stalemate, which White was aiming for from the very beginning.

Change of fame in two thematic variants.

There are remarks to the unmarked studies:

- N°20 (h4-e3) – after the 4th move, repeats his study from L.Topko JT, 1-3 Prize, 2009 with a thematic move for White;
- N°3 (b7-h8) – the thematic move in the final is very much inferior to, for example, the study of M.Gromov & O.Pervakov, 2nd Prize, S.Badalov-55 MT, 2017;
- N°11 (g2-g7) – a very questionable option 2.Ne2 reduces the impression;
- N°12 (a4-f4) – saving White's extra pawn without any surprises;
- N°1 (d3-a4), N°5 (d2-d6), N°9 (h3-a2), N°13 (e4-b3) – accurate endgames with uninteresting play;
- N°8 (f1-h3), N°4 (g1-c7) – with uncomplicated play of both sides, which, nevertheless, lacks subtlety and sharpness;
- N°19 (e1-h1) – capturing a standing rook on a thematic move still looks awkward;
- N°10 (a5-f1), N°6 (b4-b2) – in technical terms, White succeeds in holding the black passers, but there is no visible artistic element in how it happens.

REPORT

Thank you to the organisers for inviting me to judge section B.1.

Statistics.:29 studies, 6 joint-compositions, 21 authors, from 14 countries.

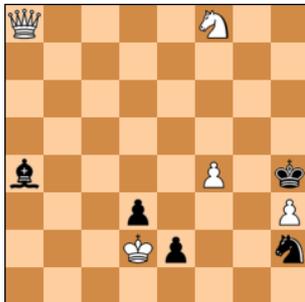

The evaluation criteria were largely based on the usual principles. I believe that content should be preferred. I therefore attached less importance to formal, aesthetic aspects, such as the natural starting position. I generally preferred the complex structure (several main lines, thematic (logical) attempts).

The selection of the prize winners was relatively easy. For the honourable mentions and commendation titles, I often had to choose which to prefer: the idea, the motifs, the the structure, quality of elaboration, etc. This strongly influenced the order of works of almost the same quality.

It is of course important to emphasize that the magnitude of the task undertaken is also an important factor.

My ranking is as follows.

It is surprising that White cannot start with checks of queen. In this case black could captures the white queen with spectacular knight forks in two variations. Bringing White's knight into play, and his active sacrifice on h4, prevents Black from playing Nf3. The knight also opens a line for his queen to direction g8 (h9). After 4....Bc6 this piece cannot be captured. In the thematic try, it is easy to see that the capture would lead to a stalemate. There is another possibility, but as long as the h3 pawn is on the board, it is hardly noticeable. It is a harmful piece, this prevents his queen from checkmate. This will be revealed at the end of the main game. Therefore white first must get rid of this harmful piece by a passive sacrifice. At the end of the manoeuvre is good the Qxc6. Black even sacrifices the knight, and it seems that, this lead to a stalemate. The surprise: 10.Kf2!! and then 11.Kg2, and now Black can only avert the mate with Queen sacrifice. The end is a worthy finish: white can no capture the another queen of black, but gives a mate instead. Great study.

After the key move 1.Nb2!!! the black king is mated if the knights move (Ndc4, Nb7 and if Nxa4, then Nbc4 mated). After 1...c4 2,Bb3!!! maintains the mate threat. The second bishop sacrifice is even more surprising. If Black's bishop moves, White mates in 7 moves. If he accepts the sacrifice, then black will be in zugzwang position in several variations on the kingside. In these, Black's knight is forced to move and white gives mate. The active play on both side, the zugzwang positions and the two excellent bishop sacrifices are very valuables. Still, it's the overall effect that really captivates.

(Problemist of Ukraine >=2 2014)]

In the first phase, both sides present bishop sacrifices. Black can bring his bishop into play by relying on the strength of his passed pawns. White uses a well-known but spectacular motif twice to stop the black pawn, or after the promotion, to captures the queen. The second phase is strategic. White's king threatens the both black pawns, this positional draw. The play is better after 12.Kb3. It is surprising how the black king defends against the overpower.

Nice foresights theme. White plays 4.Kg5 in main line, but in the thematic try instead of this 4.e3. In the first case, the pawn endgame wins for white, in the thematic try this leads to a draw in a very similar play. The white king's maneuver is very accurate and sightly. I think the two tries in the first move are valuable too

After an imaginative and entertaining tactical introduction, it is the bishop's bad corner field that causes problems for White. In the introduction play, the black king escapes to c8. This is a possible stalemate nest, look at after 4.Bc6. White avoids the trap with 5.Kg8, otherwise if 5.Kg7 (try) , then after the captures on e4, White will be in zugzwang, and a stalemate follows.

In a logical try Black with the help of a preliminary check 8...Qf7+ causes White's position to weaken, and then wins the Queen. With a preliminary check on the first move, White forces the black King to move to unfavorable squares. As a result, in the main line the black Queen will be pinned. In the additional line, the black King chooses another square so as not to interfere with his Queen, but then White changes the plan to another, which was erroneous in the main line. Complex idea! The bad impression is that White's play in the extra line is very minimal, White is "offside" in contrast to Black's play on the try.

The study is much more interesting than the author presented it. Not every dual-free sequence of moves is an study. This applies to some studies in the competition.

Unawarded studies:

Study N°1 Valery Kalashnikov (Russia). The try and the logical try indicated by the author have dual refutations.

Study N°5 Marc Gelly (France). It is not necessary to start the study with Black to move. Duals in the final.

Study N°7 Daniele Gatti (Italy). A lot of technical pieces were used to implement the idea.

Study N°8 Daniele Gatti & Mario Micaloni (Italy). The idea of the study is unclear.

Study N°9 Helmut Waelzel (Germany). The study is worthy of publication.

Study N°11 Can Aydinoglu (Turkey). The idea of the study is unclear.

Study N°13 Gennady Matjushin (Ukraine). This is a very interesting bishop endgame, but not a study.

Study N°15 Vladimir Neistadt (Russia). Unsuccessful introduction with exchanges of pieces.

Study N°17 Jan Timman (Netherlands). Dual order of White's moves 2.Rb3! Bxb3+ 3.Kf8 Nd7+ 4.Bxd7 Rb5 5.Bxb5.

Study N°19 Marc Gelly (France). The idea of the study is unclear.

Study N°20 Alain Pallier (France). Lots of analytical lines. The idea of the study is unclear.

Study N°25 Marc Gelly (France). White prevents the black King from breaking through by advancing the pawn column. Duals make the lines short, so the meeting of the Kings never happened.
