Let's start with some odds and ends:

EG 15

No 740, I.Krikheli. According to EG 22 this first-prize-winner is unsound, but the alleged dual 1.Rd8 fails to 1.... Rc3 2.Kb7 (2.Kb6 Kf6) Ke4 3.Rd7 Rc5 and black wins.

EG 79

No 5491, A.Koranyi. This first-prize-winner is unsound: 3.... Kc7 4.Kh4 Sd5 wins for black.

EG 94

No 6963, V.Dolgov. A remarkable case. Apart from the finale (known from Birnov) virtually everything is faulty. I found 7 defects:

- 1.... Kf2 (for ... Rc1+) wins for black: 2.Re8 (2.Rc3 Se7 3.d6 Rh5+) Rc1+ 3.Kb6 Rb1+ 4.Ka6 Ra1+ 5.Kb6 (5.Kb7 Sd4 6.d6 aSb5) Se7 6.d6 eSc8+ 7.Kc7 Sb5+.
- 1.... Sb8 wins for black: 2.Re7 (2.Re8 Sd7+ 3.Kd6 Rh7, 2.Rb3 Sd7+ 3.Kd6 Rh7 4.Rb7 Sc8+, 2.Ra3 Rh7, 2.Kb6 Rh7) Sc8 3.Re8 Kf2.
- 2.Re8 draws: 2.... Sb7+ (2.... Sf7 3.Re7) 3.Kb6 Rh7 (or ... Sb5) 4.Rf8+ and 5.Kxa7.
- 2.... Rh7 followed by either ... Sb7+ and ... Sd6, or ... Sc8 and ... Sb7+ wins for black.
- 2.... Ke2 wins for black: 3.Rb8 (3.Kb6 Rh7) Sf7 4.Re8+ (4.Rb7 Rc1+ 5.Kd4 Sd6, 4.Kb6 Ra1 5.Rb7 Sd6, 4.d6 Rc1+ 5.Kd5 Rd1+) Kd3 5.Re7 Rc1+ 6.Kb4 Rb1+ 7.Ka5 Sd6.
- 3.... Rh7 (for ... Sc8+) wins for black: 4.Rc3 Rb7+ 5.Ka6 Sb5 6.Rc8 Sc7+ 7.Ka5 Sf7.
- 5.... Sg6 wins for black: 6.Rb8 Se5+ 7.Kc7 eSf7.

EG 99

No 7735, G.Nadareishvili. Another false claim of unsoundness of a first-prize-winner: EG 102 gave the the line 5.Rxc3 dxc3 6.Sd4 c1Q 7.Se2+ Kf1 8.Sxc1 Sg6+ 9.Kg7 Sxe7 10.Kf6 Sc6 11.Ke6 Ke1 12.Sa2 c2 13.Sb4 draw, but better is 11.... c2 12.Kd5 Sa7 13.Kc4 Ke1 and now both 14.Kd3 Kd1 15.Sa2 Sc6 16.Kc3 (16.Sc3+ Kc1) Se7 17.Kd3 Sd5 18.Kc4 Sf4 19.Kc3 Se2+ 20.Kb2 Kd2 and 14.Kb3 Kd2 15.Kb2 Sb5 16.Sb3+ Kd1 17.Sc1 Sc3 18.Sb3 (18.Sd3 Kd2) Se2 win for black (database-checked).

EG 116

No 9816, J.van Reek. There is a dual win: 5.h5 a4 6.Sd5 Kxd5 7.h6 a3 8.h7 a2 9.c4+ Kxc4 10.h8Q.

No 9860, V.Kovalenko. Note i) is faulty: after the given 5.Kh3 Rg1 6.Kh2 Rg4 white wins by 7.Sf5+ Kxf8 8.Ra8+ Kf7 9.Sh6+ and 10.Sxg4, pointed out by Marco Campioli (Italy). Better is 6.... Rg5, which draws after 7.Sh7 Rh5+ 8.Kg3 Rxb7 9.Ra7+ Kd8 10.Rxb7 stalemate. Compared to the actual solution the white king is too far off.

No 9932, S.Zakharov. There is a dual: 2.Bxg2 e2 3.Bb2 f1Q+ 4.Bxf1 exf1Q+ 5.Kg5 Se5 6.Bxe5 draws, e.g. 6.... Qg2+ (6.... Qc1+ 7.Bf4) 7.Kf6 Qf3+ 8.Kg5 Qe3+ 9.Bf4 Qe8 10.Kh6 Qf8+ (else Kg7) 11.Kg6, threatening Bg5 or Bh6.

No 9934, L.Veretennikov. No solution. After 8.... cxb3 9.Qa5+ Kbl 10.Qe1+ Ka2 11.Qe2+ b2 12.Qxh2 black draws by 12.... c5 13.Kg4 c4 (but not 13.... Ka1 14.Qh8 d4 15.Qa8+ Kbl 16.Qa6 Kc2 17.Qc4+ Kd2 18.Qb5 and wins), and now:

- 14.Kf3 Ka1 15.Qe5 Ka2 16.Qh2 Ka1 17.Qh8 Ka2 18.Qa8+ Kb3 19.Qb7+ Kc2 20.Qh7+ Kc1 21.Qh1+ Kc2 22.Qg2+ Kc1 23.Qf1+ Kc2 24.Qe2+ Kc1 25.Ke3 d4+ draw.
- 14.Qc2 Ka1 15.Qa4+ Kbl 16.Kf3 Kc1 17.Qa3 Kc2 18.Qa2 Kc1 19.Ke2 c3 20.Qa3 c2 21.Ke3 Kbl 22.Qd3 Ka1 draw.

No 9940, G.Amirjan. The award says that this study has significance for endgame theory, but Cheron and Nunn already describe the winning process in detail. The final underpromotion is not even strictly necessary, as there is a different, though long-winded, way to win this ending: 8.Kf6 Rf2+ 9.Ke7 Re2+ 10.Kf8 Ra2 11.Rg7+ Kh8 12.Rg6 (creating a loop-hole for the king on h6) Ra8+ (12.... Kh7 13.Rf6 Re2 14.Rf1) 13.Ke7 Ra7+ 14.Kf6 Ra6+ 15.Kf5 Ra5+16.Kg4 Ra8 17.Kg5 Kh7 18.Ra6 Rb8 19.Kf6 followed by Ra6-e6-e8.

Moreover, the 3rd move of black is bad. Every sensible defence against white's only threat (4.Rb8+ and 5.f6) draws: 3.... Rd8 and white cannot make progress, 3.... Rf2 4.Kf6 Kg8 5.Rb8+ Kh7 with a standard draw (6.Ke6 Kg7, 6.Rf8 Ra1), 3.... Re2+ 4.Kf6 Kg8 5.Rb8+ Kh7 6.Kf7 Ra2 7.Rb7 Ra6 8.f6 Ra8 (database-checked).

Almost all the lines above can be found in Nunn's book 'Secrets of Rook Endings'.

No 9944, V.Kozhakin, V.Kovalenko. No win after 1.... Bf4 (please note that bPh5 should be on g5). Black intends to move his bishop up and down the diagonal b8-f4 and wait. As soon as the queen moves black plays ... g1Q; Qxg1 g2 with an easy draw. The only try for white is 2.Ke7 Bb8 3.Kf6 Bf4 4.Kf5 Bd2 5.Qd1 g1Q 6.Qxg1 g2 7.Qd1, but this does not pose many problems: 7.... Kh2 (7.... Bf4 also draws) 8.Qxd2 Kg3 and white cannot win, e.g. 9.Qe1+ Kh2 10.Qe2 Kh1 11.Qe4 Kh2 12.Qe5+ Kh3 13.Qh8+ Kg3 14.Qd4 Kh2 15.Qb2 Kg3 16.Qa1 Kf2.

No 9945, A.Grin. No win: 2... Sg3+ 3.Kg6 Kb2.

No 9955, V.Kos. I cannot find a draw for black after 2.Sxg5 Kxg5 3.Sh3+ Kh5 (3.... Kf6 4.Rg4, 3.... Kf5 4.g4+ Kf6 5.Sg1) 4.g3, e.g. 4.... Rg2

5.Rh4+ Kg6 6.Rg4+ Kh5 7.Rg8 d5 8.Kc5 d4 9.Kc4 and white wins.

No 9971, V.Gorbunov. As white I would be confident to draw the position after 7.Rh6+ Kxh6 8.h8Q+ Rh7 9.Sf5+ Rxf5 10.Qd4 (winning the e-pawn). Unfortunately it is impossible to support this opinion with exhaustive analysis, and theory has scarcely investigated the GBR class 1600.01 so far.

No 10001, A.Koranyi. There is a dual draw: 1.Be6 Kg2 (1.... Re5+ 2.Kf2 is even dangerous for black) 2.Ra2+ Kg1 3.Ra4 Re5+ 4.Kd1 (to keep the 2nd rank open) g3 5.Bh3 Rh5 6.Ra2 draw.

No 10004, J.Roche. No solution: Guy Bacqué points out 5.... Re1+ 6.Kg2 (6.Kf2 Rxb1 7.Rd7 Bc3) Re7 7.Sd2 (7.Rd1 Kc2 8.Rh1 Bb2) Kc2 8.Rd8 Re2+ and black wins.

No 10005, J.Murarasu. Mr Campioli even found a win(!) for white: 1.Kg8 (threatening 2.g5+ fxe5 3.f5 and the f-pawn promotes with check) g5 2.f5 a5 3.e5 wins.

No 10007, J.Rusinek. No solution (please note that bBh3 should be on h6). 6.... Kxd2 (threatening... Bd3+ followed by ... Bg7) wins for black: 7.Rc2+ (7.e5 Rxa1+, or 7.Rg3 Bd3+ 8.Kb2 Rb4+ 9.Ka3 Rb8+ 10.Ka4 Ra8+) Ke3 8.Rg2 Bd3+ 9.Kb2 Bc5 10.Rg3+ Ke2 11.Rg2+ Kf3 12.Rd2 Ke3.

No 10013, G.Amirjan, D.J.Brink, J.van Reek. The authors of the correction have omitted the wPa4 from Amirjan's original and thereby introduced a dual (please note that wKf4 should be on g4): 2.Rxb2+ followed by Bxa2 and Rxc2 draws. With wPa4 this doesn't work: 2.Rxb2+ Bxb2 3.Bxa2+ Kxa2 4.Rxc2 Kb1 and black wins. Irrespective of the wPa4 there is another dual in both versions: 2.Rxb2+ Bxb2 3.Rxc2 (3.Bf5 a1Q 4.Rxc2 transposes, but better is 3.... Bc3) a1Q 4.Bf5 (or 4.Rh2 a2 5.Bf5+ Kc1 6.Rh1+ Kd2 7.Rxa1 Bxa1 8.Be6 draw) Ka2 5.Be6+ Kb1 6.Bf5 Qa2 7.Re2+ Kc1 8.Be6 Qxe6 9.Rxe6 a2 (9.... Kd2 10.Rh6) 10.Re1+ Kc2 11.Rh1 Bc1 12.Rh2+ Bd2 13.Rh1 draw.

We continue EG's intermittent series of translations from important twentieth century Russian sources hitherto inaccessible in English.

The extensive introductory material to Troitzky's "Sbornik shakhmatnykh etyudov" (Leningrad, 1934) was almost entirely omitted from the English "360" (Leeds, 1937) edition. The three items - two by Troitzky, the third a long essay by Herbstman - are important to us today for two reasons. First, they supply details indispensable to the proper evaluation of Troitzky's life, labours and legacy; second, they illustrate the high level of discussion of chess aesthetics that was expected over 60 years ago. There is a case for maintaining that standards have plunged in the interim and that the time is ripe for revival, re-education and reassessment.

There is one overriding caveat: the year is 1934, the place is the USSR, and what follows is a complete (though not always a word-for-word) translation (by AJR). Ideological (Marxist-Leninist) genuflexions, de rigueur right up until glasnost (1985), have not been excised from the original: they are left to the reader to identify, and either to interpret (on his own responsibility reading between the lines), - or to ignore. They ought not to influence evaluation of the bulk of the material, which we consider to be of high quality. The tone, manner, thoroughness, even the vocabulary, especially of Herbstman's essay, may open the eyes (or raise the eyebrows) of a Western reader for whom the knowledgeable discussion of the aesthetics of endgame studies is new territory. Criticism of the essay might focus on exaggeration, bias in the selection, and the easy wisdom of hindsight, but such criticism can be only a matter of degree.

This is a translation of Herbstman's preface on pages 13 to 34 of Volume 1 of Troitzky's selection of 750 selection of his studies. The first volume appeared in Leningrad in 1934, but the second was never published. Translation of Troitzky's own introduction, the complete text of his 'Not an autobiography', and all of the referenced chess positions, will be in EG's next issue.

A.A.Troitzky - founder of the contemporary chess study

1. While this edition of Aleksei Alekseevich Troitzky's chess studies will enable the broad chess public of the USSR to become acquainted with the 40 years' of creative activity by the world's most prestigious composer, the event is significant also for the whole world of chess composition.

It was Troitzky who not only brought to light but elaborated the overwhelming majority of the study concepts and ideas that the composers of today work with.

It was Troitzky whose flood of beautiful work closed the gap between the study and the problem, and at the level of ideas established the link between the study and the practical game.

It was Troitzky who fashioned a theory of the chess study that is self-consistent and complete. Chess composition, which hitherto had been no more than a plaything or amusement, was raised by the power of Troitzky's talent to the level of genuine art. For this achievement the Soviet state has awarded him the title of Honoured Art Worker.

To analyse Troitzky's achievement in detail so as to lay bare its conceptual and technical form and content requires an investigation in depth. In this essay I attempt to delineate, if only in its basic attributes, the broadest features of our composer's creative achievement, to comment on his intellectual primacy and decisive priority in every area of study composition, and to characterise his approach to creativity.

Let us start by considering the salient features of study composing that prevailed prior to Troitzky's advent.

The majority of so-called "studies" were investigative or analytical, applied to an ordinary ending, or else they consisted of middle-game combinations lacking in subtlety. The output of Philidor, Stamma and Mendheim was of this kind, and to a great extent also the work of Horwitz and Kling, Berger, Jespersen, Behting and others. In only a few of these early studies can we discern chess beauty in the foreground, specific beauty built on the unexpected effect of a sacrifice, of a manoeuvre, of the movement and disposition of the pieces, of a climactic configuration, and suchlike. But this limited chess beauty was enough to satisfy the barely developed aesthetic taste of the time, appropriate to its epoch in history - and determined by it. Three examples illustrate our assertion. The first is taken from the first prize set (so, 'beauty' recognised and honoured!) consisting of six studies by B.Horwitz entered for the international composing tourney organised in conjunction with the London tournament of 1862 on the occasion of the Great Exhibition of industry. The second and third are from Chigorin's magazine "Shakhmaty" in the year 1894.

H1 shows: a white queen sacrifice by a capture on the first move, a series of checks, and a single quiet move by the rook to threaten two mates, whereupon Black saves himself from the instant fatality of one threat only to fall victim to the other, itself hardly remote; construction that is cumbersome and unnatural; spectator black pieces. In the Troitzky era, in our era, such a study would scarcely be deemed worthy of publication, let alone honour. The other two studies betray similar coarseness and forcing play. This was no accident, but a consequence of the state of study development at the time: clumsiness of starting, and indeed final, positions, a single line of play, compulsion of move without choice by either side, the complete absence of black counter-play, a mechanical solution, and finally, feebleness, lack of colour, and naivety in the motivations - in short, poverty of thought. It must be conceded that this period played its role in history by studying the endgame, feeling the contours of study aesthetics, and groping for ideas. There were chance discoveries that shone forth by virtue of thought or expression, but these can be counted in singles, as exceptions to the general rule.

Troitzky, whose first study appeared in 1895 (his first problem was published two years earlier), produced a veritable revolution in study composition when his brilliant output and his pronouncements on theory redefined the scope and significance of the study to create its present-day terminology. Each new Troitzky study introduced a deeply considered approach to the questions surrounding chess composition and opened up new horizons.

Troitzky describes his first steps in composing in these words: "The publications that came my way - Russian newspapers, but also the German treatises by Dufresne and Berger - failed to show me (or perhaps I failed to notice) artistic studies, so that I had nothing and no one to work on as a model. All my output was so-to-speak from scratch. To begin with I even lacked the basic form of the study, having started by converting problems into studies. I thought it was possible to compose positions from a game (that is, entirely true to life) in the guise of problems, and that is how I in fact started. My first effort of all was naive in the extreme:

Win
It is a win (mate in 2) by 1.d4. I put together five more such positions, after which I had done with problems and effectively rejected them, plunging straight into the realm of studies."

Originality and beauty of idea, stirring in the solver the most subtle aesthetic experience, an experience of beauty whose manifestation, evoked by the outward particular features of board and men, itself undergoes scarcely any modification, even when the content ascends to a new and loftier rung; naturalness and vibrancy of starting position: for a study must resemble an episode from a game, be it endgame or middle-game, and must resemble it not just externally but internally, not just in its structure but in its content, and, most vital of all, it must reflect the game's principles and most prominent features; next, lightness of construction and play must match economy of form and solution: passive on-lookers are anathema, for there is no place for even a single piece that does not participate in the struggle; then, the pieces that play a role in the finale, in the climactic position, must be organically woven into it: a study cannot tolerate idle hands, for the more work that is done by this or that piece the greater the dynamism, indeed the value, of the whole; a Troitzky era study will strive for inner tension, for the surprise effect of a manoeuvre or sacrifice; its solution must be unique, ruling out parallel paths that would also satisfy the stipulation, while at the same time being enriched by a plurality of variations, and by deceptive divarication in the solution, in other words by thematic tries, by active counter-play, equally distributed between the contending sides in achieving the stipulated win or draw, both sides being confronted with major obstacles; a study should be shot through with double-edged struggle, it should be packed with action that stirs and captivates.

Only a Troitzky could impart the foregoing - and all of it he and he alone has accomplished, both in deed and in word.

However one approaches it, a Troitzky study charms by the lightness and naturalness of its solution and structural touch; the aesthetic effect, founded on play rich in ideas, is generally prefaced by a subtle introduction interesting in its own right, full of sparkling strategic and tactical incident; gone are the long solutions of the old masters - instead we meet large-scale studies with branching variations, everywhere with lively play; a quiet move adds the richness of deep motivation and a well disguised threat; the phases of the struggle persuasively interlace. The very act of putting Troitzky's studies under the microscope teaches us to regard the study as more than a ruptured sequence of moves; instead, it becomes a unified, assembled product. Each study glitters with the depth and novelty of its conception: it entralls, it excites, it captures the imagination, and it stimulates our own creativity.

Circumstances decreed that the chess world knew of many of Troitzky's compositions only after the themes and ideas they revealed had been realised by other composers. [Herbstman has in mind the relative obscurity of the St Petersburg chess columns of 1895-99 and Troitzky's enforced abandoning of, and separation from, chess until 1905, rather than the subsequent disruption of WW-I, the 1917 Revolution, and their prolonged aftermath. To make sense of the publication of Troitzky studies in the years 1897-1899 we may reasonably assume that the composer either had already submitted, or continued to submit, his already composed studies (to Chigorin, presumably) for publication. Tr.] It is asserted that H.Rinck and the Platov brothers developed battles between the pieces [Herbstman's words are clear, his intended meaning is not. Rinck specialised in pawnless play but only two such early Platov studies are in Whitworth's 1994 book. H6 and H7 may indicate his meaning. Tr.], that domination is the imprescriptible due of Rinck, that Simkhovich discovered the positional draw, and Herbstman incarceration. In point of fact all these themes and more were discovered and realised by Troitzky: the above-mentioned composers either deepened them or systematised them. The chronological priority of Troitzky with respect to a group of themes was established by Vasily Platov in his article on Troitzky which appeared in Zadachy i Etyudy No.1 (1927); and the reader is at liberty to pursue for himself this research angle by comparing the studies of the present collection [of Troitzky's studies] with the anthologies of other composers. The point we make here is not that this or that study by Troitzky was published earlier than the analogous study by another composer - this is easily checked by comparing publication dates - but that the priority of idea in practically every region of study creativity belongs to Troitzky. Whether we take the struggle of pieces, domination, systematic ideas, checkmate, stalemate, underpromotion, problem themes, positional draw, incarceration, pinning, or synthesis of ideas - we find all of these, underlined by a pervasive breadth of scope, realised in Troitzky's multi-faceted work. The struggle of assorted force of approximately equal value (as a rule the side that achieves the stipulation is materially somewhat weaker, albeit there is the familiar positional compensation in having the first move) is convincingly and comprehensively illustrated in the next five studies.

H4 is a miniature showing a tense struggle with queens. Quiet white queen moves, repeated sacrifice of the white knight, mating threats - at first on the file, then on the diagonal - all is out of the ordinary for material balance of this kind! H5 shows a threefold rook sacrifice abetted by three knight forks. Unique intermediate moves force Black's king onto a vulnerable square where the knight takes profit. H6 and H7 are lively piece struggles, in the first case with rooks and pawns, in the second with bishops and pawns. H8 handles two knights against the queen: White wins the opposing queen after offering her no fewer than 23 (!) squares to choose from. Troitzky shows in this study, and in earlier studies, the domination theme that Rinck showed with less conviction - cf. H9 [Only the year is given by Herbstman, not other source details, which weakens his case. Tr.] and H10 [But Rinck shows in H10 the full 14-square domination as against Troitzky's 13, the latter requiring one more chessman and a shorter solution. Tr.]. Yet Rinck's study was published 15 years later! Troitzky applied himself generously to so-called systematic ideas. Katzenellenbogen covered this aspect of Troitzky's work in his article in Zadachy i etyudy No.8, therefore I shall quote just two examples, H11 and H12.

In H11 after a series of checks White can capture the black pawn on e5, after which the queen returns by the same path to a7, all of which merely removes Black's defence of his knight on d4. Then the queen undertakes a whole system of movements to mop up the black pawns on f5, c3, b2, and on move 38 to deprive Black of his last chance, the bishop on d5. In H12 the white king ascends or descends the board four times on parallel files.

Troitzky brilliantly illuminates the theme of checkmate. What could be more paradoxical or economical than checkmate with a minor piece, in violation of chess theory guidelines? H13 and H14 show us mate with a lone bishop and a lone knight, and in this book the reader will even find an anticipation of L.Kubbel's brilliant sacrifices of the queen - leading to mate with a lone bishop or knight.

Chess theory is a set of conventions. Its specific application to the game and to composition stems from these conventions. Of course objective truth has a conventional character for chess composition, since it consists of the reflection of principles and idea-rich moments peculiar to practical play, which is by its very nature conventional. The most conventional of all conventions is - stalemate, whose essence is a draw in the presence of overwhelming superiority of the opponent! Stalemate is a rare occurrence over-the-board. Perhaps this is why stalemates are relatively rare in Troitzky's oeuvre. But even here he has something to teach the composers of today. H3 illustrates the type of stalemate study prevalent before Troitzky. His very first studies draw a sharp boundary line with the productions of his predecessors. In H15 and H16 (this one by the German composer P.Heuäcker) the stalemate arises from promotion of a black pawn propelled forward by pressure from the white king. H16 was published 32 years after H15. When we compare them, Troitzky's shows three stalemate positions and Black has a choice of defences, while Heuäcker's is shorter and the solution has a more forcing character with only one variation, so no more than a pallid allusion to the superb play that unfolds in H15. Another example of our comparative technique contrasts H17 with H18 by the German composer G.Bernhardt, separated from each other by 26 years. H18 seems blunted and anaemic, lacking in the interesting introductory play with lively activity by the black knight that we find in H17. We could adduce further examples, but to do so would not further the purpose of the present essay.

The themes so far examined are those that I would provisionally call classic, qualitatively set against themes that we may call romantic. In my article "The evolution of the study" ("64", No.19 of 1928) I made the observation that with classicism in the study it is the material that largely determines the idea, serving as an end in itself, with the alignment of material in balance, while in the romantic sub-genre it is the idea that determines the choice of material, the alignment in the latter lacking stability. The idea with the classic is canonical, with the romantic it is unfettered. I have since laid stress on the tendency in both classicism and romanticism to develop having regard to realism, by which is to be understood the reflection and expression in artistic form of the principles and prominent creative incidents of the game as played over-the-board. It should be pointed out that these qualitatively distinct styles of creativity in the study are solidly represented in the work of Troitzky.

Themes that stand on the border between the classic and romantic, now and then breaching the code of stability of force that characterises the classical tradition, are: promotion, the passive sacrifice, and refusal of material. The embodiment of these themes is yet again outstanding in the case of Troitzky.

H19 and H20 will speak to us about this with the unrivalled eloquence of chess poetry. Let us pause for a moment on H20. What is the motivation of the promotion to knight? It is that after 4...Se4+ 5.Kh4 Sxg3 6.Kxg3, White remains with two knights and Black with a pawn. (We shall have occasion later to deal with this research field of our composer.) Promotion of the self-same white pawn to bishop is ruled out by that self-same black pawn: Black would play 4...e5, and after the white knight has moved, Se6+ would follow, drawing. When Black in the second variation liquidates his pawn, so as to forestall White winning an endgame with his two knights, he simultaneously gives up his prospective attack on the white knight on f4, and then White is able to promote to bishop after all, since he is left with two minor pieces and a pawn against a minor piece. H20 is a stroke of genius in its depth and succinctness and lightness of implementation!

We can now turn to Troitzky's work with problem themes. Here too Troitzky's pre-eminence is plain. In articles placed in Magyar Sakkvilág in 1929, and in the review Zadachy i etudy No.7 I did no more than systematise and supplement what Troitzky himself had done years before. The most subtle of problem manoeuvres such as the 'roman' decoy, Turton doubling, the pericritical Herlin-Loyd movement [Paul Valois: I do not think that Loyd links with the Herlin manoeuvre], cutting-point (German: Schnittpunkt), focal point (German: Brennpunkt) and repeated square revisiting - all of these feature with the utmost clarity in Troitzky's work. From the large number of studies with problem themes I have chosen four. H21 and H22 show the cutting-point theme and sacrifice on the point of intersection of two differently moving black pieces. In H21 we see for the first time in a study two cutting-points (which both A.Gulaev and myself achieved only 20 years later), and in 1934 in Shakhmaty v SSSR there appeared a study with a triple cutting-point. H22 is a surprising example of the cutting-point employing not two white pawns, which is customary, but one, putting the specific characteristics of the pawn to good use, namely movement on the file and capture on the diagonal.

H23 illustrates the focal point idea, combining it with zugzwang. L.Kubbel sums up H24: "The problem theme of focal points is transferred in a masterly manner into a stalemate study and shown in three variations."

F.Simkhovich systematised and sharpened the creative attention of composers with the idea of the positional draw, a highly romantic idea. That is his due, beyond any doubt. But for the filigree positional draw, multifaceted and comprehensive, earlier than any other, we must look again to Troitzky. The isolated king, the cornered queen, cyclic attack, varied forms of perpetual check, all of these are manifest in a series of brilliant Troitzky compositions created at the very start of his activity and continuing up to the present time. Let us compare the locking-in of the black queen, or if the latter slips out, of the black king, the theme of Troitzky's H25, with Simkhovich's H26.

Let our composer speak for himself: "After 3.Se5 the black queen is restricted to two squares only, g8 and h7, If she tries for freedom via h6 then this restricts the black king to two squares, g6 and h5. If White mistakenly meets the move Qg8 (or Qh7) with Be2+, instead of Bc4 (or Bd3), then Black wins, because the black king slips out via h6 or g5. Here we see the germ of the idea shown by Simkhovich in his study honoured in Pravda. This study is very much to my liking - I think it is simply superb. Material, position, play, idea - they all impress. ... Simkhovich has succeeded in cultivating a luxuriant fruit from a seedling (my position) that maybe he was not fully aware of. The square e8, which in his study could give the black queen her escape hatch, were it not blocked, corresponds to the square h6 in my study. A specific queen move in both studies (Qe8 or Qh6) is the most interesting move, determining the perpetual check to the black king. The white king manoeuvre Kb1-a1-b1-a1 in his study corresponds to the bishop moves Bc4-d3-c4-d3 in mine, though their nature differs somewhat, and H26 is more subtle. It is interesting to note that the material is in each case practically the same: Simkhovich skilfully added a knight as a sacrificial decoy of the black queen to an unfavourable square, after which two minor pieces oppose the queen, as in my study. Of course, we should not descend to counting pawns - they reflect the depth of the conception."

This deconstruction of a study shows that Troitzky is not only a study poet of the highest order, a real creator of studies, but also a profound theoretician.

Our next three examples are positional draws. In H27, thanks to his use of tempo-gaining moves, White succeeds in locking the black king in and thereby reducing the black queen's power to nil. H28 is one of Troitzky's more recent pieces. It spurred the tourney judge to a burst of lyricism on the occasion of placing it highly: "This study shows the positional draw theme. The construction is light and refined. One senses the master's fist. This is after we are convinced that the black queen really is in hock - we don't want to believe it, there is so much space on the board. There has to be a way out, but, my goodness, there is not." H29 is a perpetual motion study, a movement that goes on for ever, an attack that never stops. The idea is geometrical, with the knight marking out an elongated rhombus, periodically revisiting the same square. With a combined attack on black rook and king the knight in one variation describes the rhombus from right to left, in another from left to right, and it could even be now to the right, now to the left, in which case the periodicity is 4, 6, 8 or 10 moves, depending on how Black plays. The checks to the black king serve as jumping-off platforms for the tireless harrying of the black rook.

Sub-dividing the incarceration theme for the use of the school of young soviet composers as a creative exercise, was my doing. But the honour of elaborating this highly interesting idea that is excellently suited to accompany other study ideas (such as pinning, and lengthy king journeys) fell to Troitzky and to him alone. The incarceration of a bishop, incarceration of a bishop by underpromotion, incarceration in conjunction with black counterplay based on a pin, all of these can be found chez Troitzky long before the positions by myself, by Gurvich, by Korolkov and many another composer. Two illustrations only must suffice, though dozens are on tap. In every case we find something new, unexpected and valuable in both the aesthetic and practical senses. Two further studies show the same theme, namely the blocking in of a knight on a corner square.

The knight speeds merrily to its quiet sepulchre in H30, while in H31 it doesn't move at all. Forcing play is absent from the solution to H30, while H31 is packed with necessity. White effectively doing nothing but react to the black hammer-blows. It is true that H31 has a lighter, more economical, construction than H30, and the play is longer, but in the light of the aforementioned defects it is far from satisfactory to place H31 on the same level as H30, which was composed 16 years earlier. Otherwise White achieves stalemate simply by the further advance and sacrifice of his pawns. 5.a6 Bg8 6.a7 e5 7.a8B!!, and the black knight cannot move because of b7-b8Q.  In introducing the present article I laid emphasis on the claim that Troitzky established a link between the game and the study at the level of ideas. The studies we have seen demonstrate the expression in artistic form of the general principles that underlie the game of chess and its tactics: the struggle for space, for time, for material; domination, rejection of material on offer, breakthrough, sacrifice and suchlike. But the highest expression of this link at the level of ideas is to be seen in the remarkable investigation of the struggle of king and two knights against king and pawn, on which Troitzky laboured many years. [The reader can roughly quantify 'many' for himself by careful reading of Troitzky's 'autobiography', scheduled for EG's next issue. Tr.]

As every master knows, it is a paradox of chess that two knights are unable to checkmate the 'bare' king if the defence, by convention black, plays correctly, since the mating move must be preceded by a position of stalemate. A few examples of positions where the black side loses because he has a pawn are to be found in the older chess treatises: the pawn's presence gives Black a move so that the stalemate is inoperative. In the latter half of the 18th century Taruffi and Chapais gave some specific examples of this possibility: in the Schachzeitung of 1862-63, and in the fourth edition of the Handbuch, Von der Lasa reproduced three such positions taken from manuscript sources in his sumptuous library. In the 19th century Bledow, Mendheim, Bolton, Kling and Horwitz, Guretzky-Cornitz, H.F.L.Meyer, P.K.Plotitsyn and others widened the scope of ideas applying to this most interesting of endgames, but they drew no further, more specific conclusions. It was left to Troitzky in his articles published from 1906 to 1910 in the Deutsche Schachzeitung to unveil to the chess world the principles underlying the struggle of two knights against pawn (or selected pawns). He defined precisely on which squares a single pawn must be held for the win to be unconditional; he established a group of exceptions, and he set down the pawn's positions for a loss or a draw depending on certain precise circumstances; and he demonstrated techniques for halting pawns and gradually confining the black king, so as to drive the latter into a mating net by application of the dynamic interacting potential of the white men.

In Troitzky's own words: "Wherever the black king may be White wins without exception only in the cases where a black pawn is blocked on a4, b6, c5, d4, e4, f5, g6, h4 or higher up the board - 26 cases in all. (The rook's pawn case was absorbed into this number only after Troitzky had pin-pointed the winning combination involving the sacrifice of a knight.) And for the following pairs of pawns: h3 and f4 (a3 and c4), e5 and f4 (d5 and c4), f6 and g5 (c6 and b5), h6 and g5 (a6 and b5), c4 and d2 (f4 and e2) - 38 cases in all. In addition cases could occur where a chance middle-game exchanging combination gives rise to an exceptional losing position with the pawn on any square at all, or even with several pawns. From the foregoing it follows that this endgame is not as abstruse or arcane as was thought - one should not run away from it."

Troitzky was not content with these specific research results: he used them for artistic ends as well, creating a series of noteworthy studies based on the two knights against pawn struggle. The reader will find in the present work a great number of studies that in one way or another link with this struggle: in some it is the central idea, in others it relates to a variation, or to a try, or to black counterplay, and so on.

This survey of Troitzky's work, modest as it has been, would be incomplete without taking account of the remarkable ability of our composer not only to discover the essential core and beauty of this or that single chess idea, but to combine several of them together into one unified product.

In H33 we see a rook promotion in black counterplay aiming at subsequent incarceration of a bishop with paralysing pin of the promoted rook - a trap which White overtrumps by himself choosing to promote to a rook. In H34 White attains stalemate by extremely subtle play that skirts round two otherwise winning underpromotions of a black pawn to bishop and rook. The theme of two underpromotions in black play is combined with the 'mirror' stalemate theme.

Even this swift survey of the treasure-house of ideas enables us to look at the excellence of the structure of chess poetry erected by Troitzky in pursuit of his chosen activity. We should underline that the full flowering of his talent is taking place in the era following the October Revolution. That is why we are entitled to recognise Troitzky as the teacher and moral inspiration of Soviet study composers.

It remains for us to consider the theory of the chess study worked out by Troitzky and published by him already in 1910. [The late John Selman tracked down the Niva article, secured a translation, and it appeared in EG11 in 1968.] We shall take a series of extracts from his article, practically forgotten today, "The fundamental principles of the art of composing chess studies".

"A chess study is a chess position on the chessboard that could have occurred in a game where one side, white by convention, offers to conclude the game either by winning or by forcing a draw.

"A study may arise in either of two ways: from a practical game, or by an effort of creativity. In the latter case the author should make the position not only possible in general, but such that it might have arisen through normal moves in a game.

"However varied study themes may be, their combinations can still be placed in one of two categories: 1) middle-game combinations, and 2) endgame combinations.

"As with all artistic endeavour the study can be considered from the standpoint of form and of content.

"The content of a study, considered as an artistic product, is the resolution of an advantage present in the position or in having the move. [But not an advantage in material. AH.]"

Thus far Troitzky on the study's essence and origin. His opinion runs counter to the standpoint adopted by certain influential West European masters.

In his introduction to the collection of Rinck's studies Johann Berger wrote: "The straightforward relationship of the study to the practical ending is that the study brilliantly illustrates and demonstrates important exceptions to a general rule. (The italics are mine. AH) These exceptions may sometimes cross boundaries that could never happen in the practical game."

H.Rinck, for example, who is one of the world's leading composers, defines the essence of the study in the same way.

And J.Mieses writes: "Studies essentially represent significant additions to theory's endgame chapter, demonstrating exceptions to general rules."

Two things stand out from such definitions: the first is the connection of the study only with the endgame phase of chess, and the second is the 'exception' relationship of the study to the bases of chess, namely chess theory.

Troitzky's ground rules laid down 24 years ago stress the study's link not only to the endgame but to the middlegame phase, a link whose strength is corroborated by the whole story of the development of the study and which today, now that we have the very specific themes such as positional draw, incarceration and pinning, and more themes from problem-dom, has received such a dazzling impulse to creativity. This is our first point. Our second is that Troitzky asserts that the study is not at all about exceptions to general rules of chess theory. Such an attitude is very superficial, being based merely on the relative strengths of the competing forces, something that applies only to primitive endgames and takes into account only, for example, cases such as king and queen against king, or king and rook against king, but not applying to involved positions where evaluation must consider not just the material strength but also the situation, chiefly the situation with respect to time, to space and to the material elements with their mutual supports and interactions. In a study White is the weaker side (if White is the stronger then, according to Troitzky, the study ceases to be artistic), so that when White wins or draws it is not because he demonstrates an exception to the rules but because, being inferior in material, he is superior in time and in space, his pieces working together in a coordinated and harmonious way. In a study it is indeed the stronger side that makes out, but the strength is transmuted: it relates to the quantity and quality of the pieces, and is expressed in other components characteristic of chess as a game.

[AJR: For what it is worth, my considered view is that Black's moves in a study are determined by applying (a sophisticated interpretation of) current endgame theory, which White nevertheless outwits: one can call the resultant entity either 'an exception to the rules' or 'the realisation of something deeper than material'. Troitzky, with Herbstman's assistance, has contributed a priceless analytic appreciation of that 'something deeper', but the alleged conflict is, I suggest, largely artificial.]

Troitzky dwells at length on technique in composing studies.

"A study acquires value as a work of art from the complexity and richness of its idea. What is most attractive about chess as a game is the element of contest. It is this that has to be given expression by allowing the defeated side a range of defensive devices in the course of the solution. The black pieces must not be too cramped: their positioning must give rise to many variations, and play should not be too short."

In his description of the embryology of the study, Troitzky refers to broadening, deepening and artistic execution - at the level of ideas.

"If variations are not inherent in the theme they can be introduced as consequences of manipulating the theme to complicate it and thereby enhance its significance. Even the simplest of moves such as for example a knight check with attack on the queen, becomes interesting if it arises in many variations.

"The deepening of an idea occurs with the unearthing of that position out of which the position develops that was chosen for the theme in the first place. The introductory moves of the solution, leading from the first position to the second, may be called preparatory. The deepening of themes is greater the more links there are between the play that follows and the preparatory play; and also the greater the freedom of the struggle, in other words the greater the number of variations that arise. Therefore moves of a brutally forcing nature, such as a series of sacrifices whose refusal is out of the question, should be as few as possible. If a move threatens something then the threat should be weak, in the sense that it ought to be distant rather than immediate. Quiet moves of the preparative waiting (ie, zugzwang) or pure waiting (tempo move) types are excellent. The exchange of the weakest piece for the strongest must be judged inartistic and therefore inadmissible. The least objectionable capture is of a very weak pawn or the exchange of the strongest piece for the weakest (ie, a sacrifice)." These two last precepts apply to the first move or to the introductory moves. Most recently Troitzky has added the following statement: "I sanction the addition of extra material (to provide scope for combinations and sacrifices) in my own studies practically only in the case of two knights against pawn(s) and specifically on the grounds of the fact that White in some way or another has to have the advantage of two whole pieces."

Troitzky places extraordinary value on artistic presentation, which "at all stages demands the observance of the principles of economy, both of means and of force. Not a single man should be present that does not play some part in the solution. Sometimes this part can be entirely passive. For instance, at most one black piece can be present to prevent a second solution. In this case the additional black force must be the minimum necessary to ensure the desired outcome. In general, in pursuit of any aim the composer should not add any new man to the board until he has convinced himself that a rearrangement of the existing pieces, or the replacement of one or more, will not do the trick. The newly introduced man must be no stronger than the duties required of it. This relates as much to black force as it does to white.

"Purity of stalemate, mate and other positions will follow as consequences of observing these requirements."

Later, while establishing the principle of 'the exclusivity of a theme', [This phrase -
 - is not explained. Tr.] Troitzky added the following to the above precepts: "As regards the strict adherence to these rules, I will confine myself to the view that minor deviations are sometimes unavoidable. There are themes which cannot be implemented otherwise, and some of these are of considerable interest."

Thus established by Troitzky, the theory of the chess study retains its validity for us today. We have recalled the classic and romantic themes in Troitzky's work. A conclusion may be drawn from all the foregoing: taking his creative output together with his theoretical pronouncements, we have to acknowledge that all in all the forty years of Troitzky's artistic endeavour have been played out under the banner of realism, to wit, expressing in the study the dazzling concepts and principles encountered in practical play. Our slogan for creativity for this stage in study development has to be - realism in the study. For the reader who will lovingly and deeply feel the subtleties of chess poetry that saturate the present collection there will burst open the whole evolution of the contemporary chess study in its broad and majestic panorama, to illuminate the way to the creative possibilities of the future.

3rd 'Hero-Towns' Match

- 50th Anniversary of Victory in Europe (1945)

This formal tourney was organised on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of victory in Europe, participation in this now almost traditional multi-genre event was restricted to the towns awarded 'hero' status for war-time valour: Volgograd (Stalingrad), Kiev, St Petersburg (Leningrad), Minsk, Moscow, Odessa and Brest. In the event Brest was included with Minsk, and the town of Tula was added.

Set theme: "Win or draw, by mutual sacrificial offer of an undefended major piece type (Q-Q, R-R)" V.Vinichenko (Novosibirsk) was judge for the studies section.

7 teams entered 10 entries from 10 composers, 8 studies in the provisional award.

Text of award (by judge, organiser): The all-genres result -

- Moscow - 23.5 points
- Tula - 19.5 points
- Leningrad - 19 points
- Kiev - 18.5 points
- Volgograd - 17 points
- Minsk+Brest - 13 points
- Odessa - 12.5 points

The standard achieved was very high indeed, and in all genres.

Lenin-120

This formal tourney official called:

All-Union State Committee for Sport, to commemorate the 120th anniversary of the birth of Vladimir Ilyich Lenin, 1989 was judged by V.Kozyrev and L.Mitrofanov, under the chief judge M.Marandiuk and organising judge K.Tarnopolsky.

The provisional award was published in No.12 of Bulletin of Central Chess Club of USSR, iv91. 155 entries received, 15 in the provisional award.

The confusion, not to say chaos, of having multiple judges (a decision made in 1989, obviously because no single judge wanted to be seen to be so closely associated with Lenin at a time of collapsing communism and burgeoning glasnost!), of whom the most experienced was absent-minded, and the others inexperienced, to judge this tourney, is strongly hinted at in the award preamble - which named names. Outside observers can afford to smile!

EG continues its series of complete lists of reciprocal zugzwangs in endings up to 5 men with no more than one pawn. The following, extracted from the appropriate Ken Thompson database by ace programmer Lars Rasmussen of Denmark, displays for the first time all 3130 reci-zugs in the endgame two knights against pawn. The list reads as follows: wK,wS,wS; bK,bP, result when white has the move; result when black has to move. In this = denotes a draw and a number gives the number of moves for the other player needs to win.

Mr. Beasley wrote us the following:

"As the new study columnist of diagrammes, I am delighted to see our award reprinted in EG, but EG 116.9929 (Bacqué after Lavaud) EG writes: "How far Marc Lavaud was consulted is unclear." In fact I wrote to Marc Lavaud before the award was published, and he told me that he had no objection to Guy Bacqué's version.

EG 117.9930 (Lewandowski) The demolition was reported by Guy Bacqué, not by the judge. The judge, and doubtless the composer, initially relied on the statement in Kasparian's Domination in 2545 endgame studies (English edition, page 385, two rooks and minor piece against queen): "As a rule, a draw is considered the outcome." Bacqué challenged this, at least in respect of the present position, and we eventually decided that he was right.

EG 117 Kutná Hora 60 (9948 - 9955) EG is wrong to talk about a provisional award; "její definitivní výsledek přinašíme" means "whose definitive results we present". The judge reported that 32 studies entered showed a lot of new and interesting ideas but that unfortunately they were hard hit by unsoundness, although enough remained to honour the anniversary in good style. He commented on the honoured studies as follows:

9948 (1Pr. Matouš) "A very demanding study in which precise play by both sides eventually leads to a win for White. The succession of tries must please the solver, as must the various ideas behind the White promotions. The best study of the tourney."

9949 (2Pr. Husák and Vlasák) "Only the first move spoils this very attractive joint composition. White must avoid a positional draw, and only precise play leads to success. Very economically constructed."

9950 (3Pr. Matouš) "The play resolves into a quite incredible and most unexpected cavalry ride, which eventually leads to success. An original and most interesting study, realized in masterly style."

9951 (1HM. Slepýan) "The heart of this study lies in two echoed stalemates which are invisible in the original position. The order of moves in the two variations is forced. Extremely original."

9952 (2HM. Hlinka) "After a forcing first move, there is a long and interesting battle between the White queen and the Black army. The queen exerts her power by precise moves in an open position. Very demanding to solve."

9953 (1Com. Topko) "The realization of familiar ideas in miniature is always pleasing."

9954 (2Com. Krejčí) "Both sides display interesting although forcing play, ending in a Black promotion either to immediate stalemate or to a positional draw. The try is also interesting."

9955 (3Com. Kos) "A familiar theme ending in two mates, though Black must help a little."

Large private collections of studies

Kasparyan's collection holds some 30,000. Harold van der Heijden's currently has over 40,000 (on computer disk), and it is still growing. According to Šachova skladba No.46 the card collection of 86-year old František Macek of Prague totals 45,000. If we knew the precise number of studies in the all-genre collection of the late J.P.Toft of Denmark, we would be able to draw up a preliminary world ranking list! A curiosity of Macek's collection is the number of Rinck's studies in it, reported as 1564, which exceeds by over 400 the number in the Frenchman's own final volume assembling his life's work in the field.

Rheinland-Pfalz and Europa-Rochade, 1991-92
This formal tourney was also known as "RP/ER-T 1991/1992"

Europa-Rochade (or Rochade Europa) is a bulky monthly, often over 70 pages, with a developing compositions section

judges: Hans Gruber and Michael Pfannkuche provisional award published in: Rochade Europa 5/1995

It was a thematic tourney for win studies, in which the white force was restricted to pawns. In consequence there were two sections, therefore there were two tourneys running concurrently. In the first section the black force was also restricted to pawns, in the second it was not. The tourney was efficiently organised, with all entries neutralised. Boris Tummes did much analysis, accomplishing many demolitions. IGM John Nunn, Arno Zude, ChessBase, and Brian Stephenson's anticipations detection service, were also consulted to excellent effect. 90 studies were entered. After testing 11 remained in the first, and 23 in the second, section.

Win

No 10041 S.Zakharov Arguing from stipulation-conscious and award-conscious hindsight (we know it's a unique-line win) "W must make up his mind about the black hP. It could be blocked (rather than captured) with bPh5 or bPh4 (not further on), so that with new wQb8 the looming stalemate (bKa1) can be lifted by wK unblocking hP - in this case the block occurs when bK takes on c3. Or hP could be captured at the moment when bK is on b5, after which the white commander crosses the board [like a field marshal in Europa's history ...] to adopt Polerio's posture."

"A pretty miniature in which the washed out spear check is combined with the fine delayed capture of bP. This is not pure ('allerdings nicht zweckrein') in that W not only avoids the d1 check but speeds up wK's march to d1 (after bKf4;)."

The late Mitrofanov entered no fewer than 26 studies, 11 of them jointly with other composers. He knew he was ill and part of him suspected he was dying. In his last months (viii-x92) he sent AJR letter after letter, enclosing a whole flurry of old and new material, which he hoped would appear in book form.

The latter illustrates the paradox that on occasions S can reach e4 from e8 faster than from f6. Besides, two interesting stalemates arise, with bR pinned, after 3.Kc5 Rd7 4.e8Q, and 6...Rb5 7.c8Q. Wola Gulowska - '94/II.

This international formal tourney was judged by A.Lewandowski (Poland)

Provisional award signed by: Lewandowski, 24iv95.

21 studies by 10 composers (Milenko Dukic entered 8) from 6 countries, 3 published in the provisional award.

Confirmation period: 3 months (presumably from 31v95), send claims to:

Dom Kultury

Pomnik Czynu Bojowego Kleeberczyk6w
28-481 Wola Gulowska

POLAND

Text of award: "... entry from IGM Rusinek was faulty, lowering the overall standard ...".

Judge: 21 studies were entered. Unfortunately the general level was very low, with straightforward, even primitive, combinations involving many captures. Such are far removed from the artistic criteria of modern studies. Several sound studies made use of well known and well worked ideas. Two promising studies were unsound, the composers ignoring obvious continuations. ... My award is restricted to three studies.

Remarks: Wola Gulowska is a town.

Translation assistance: Jerzy Rosankiewicz.

Birnov MT of Molodoy Leninets, 1989

This informal tourney was judged by A.Milokumov (Volograd).

Text: "Almost all participants contributed as it were towards repaying a debt to the Volgograd master in that they gave examples of one of his characteristics, namely the art of improvisation, in that something of their own was added to what was already known. The tourney was a success in that only two entries were found to be defective, and one anticipated."

11 studies from 11 composers out of 18 entries published.

PHÉNIX, 1988-90

This informal tourney was judged by Pauli Perkonjoja (Finland).

Provisional award published in PHÉNIX 28, supplement, 1995(?). Text: "The level of competing studies was satisfactory, although I should have liked to see one or two masterpieces, missing here, in my opinion. My award may be over-generous, in that I decided to honour 11 studies in all: one prize, three honourable mentions, and seven grouped commendations."

20 studies published, 2 demolished by solvers, 3 more by the judge.

1. XXXVIII FIDE PCCC Meeting -
Turku (Finland) 22-29viii1995

2. FIDE Album 1992-1994 Selection
Tourney - Announcement

Our Finnish friends being both so meticulous and so reliable it behoves us to believe them when they tell us that their homeland includes 179,584 islands and 187,888 lakes. We would like to have experienced them all. As it was, Tammenterho Nature Reserve and neater-than-neat Naandali were compulsive viewing on the glorious day that concluded with a head-swimming home-coming to Turku the scenic, social and gastronomic way - by water. The bearded ship's captain shook hands with each and every one of us as we stepped on board.

Talking of boards there was chess composing galore, though just one studies-related event, a Russian plea for a repair-job on this Troitzky.

i) But 3...Se5+, and Black wins.

And there was chess solving, with the host team headed by ageless enigmatic postman Pauli Perkonoja triumphing when it mattered most, in both WCSC team and individual events.

Ukraine was admitted as a PCCC member, with study-composer Gorbunov the delegate.

The full complement of seven extant standing sub-committees was in action, with PCCC President Bedrich Formánek putting in an appearance at them all. They were, with a parenthesised approximation of the number of participants: Codex - the oldest (5); Computers (9); FIDE Album and Publications (8); Qualifications - ie, for awarding titles (5); Studies (5); WCCT (6); WCSC (5). To resolve a doubt relating to the application of simple or two-thirds majorities in voting in the full PCCC, a Statutes (3) sub-committee was formed, performed its work well, and was dissolved.

As if these were not enough, a new standing sub-committee was formed, for 'Terminology' (5). A number of hearts sank. It is not that we cannot use a single authoritative reference for good definitions - of course we can. But the task is time-consuming (consider just one aspect, that of translation!) to the point of impossibility, and if, as may well be the case, there are terms that deserve a choice or range of definitions (for example according to genre), debate will be endless. No studies specialist volunteered to serve!

The Studies Sub-committee worked exceedingly well, half of the time in Russian. An addendum to the notorious '50-move rule' (part of Article 10 'The Completed Game' of the FIDE Laws of Chess) was recommended to the full Commission.

[The current wording reads: "The game is drawn when a player having the move claims a draw and demonstrates that at least the last 50 consecutive moves have been made by each side without the capture of any piece and without the movement of any pawn. This number of 50 moves can be increased for certain positions, provided that this increase in number and these positions have been clearly announced by the organizers before the event starts." Curiously, no one seems to have pointed out the absurdity that as the wording stands the capture of a pawn by a piece does not interrupt the count. Also, as the late André Chéron pointed out decades ago, 'and without checkmate' still needs to be added.]

The proposed addendum.

"Footnote on composed endgame studies.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, no limitation on the number of moves shall apply to the correct solution to a composed chess endgame study, unless explicitly stated otherwise, for example as an addition to the stipulation. (A study is a composed position with a stipulation of 'win' or 'draw'. In a study there is no player to make a claim and no person to whom to address a claim. In a study the sole criterion of a true result is analytical proof.)"

The full Commission, without discussion, approved the wording, which is being passed on for consideration by the authorised body, namely the FIDE Rules Committee. This committee meets at four yearly intervals. Its next scheduled meeting is before the end of 1995.

The Studies sub-committee did more work. It asked Israel to consider the inclusion of a studies-only solving contest at the meeting in Tel-Aviv (12-19x96, 'registration' by 15viii96); respectfully requested the other sub-committees ('Terminology'?) to bear in mind the existence of the Studies Sub-Committee in their deliberations; suggested that guidelines for the rational naming and identification of tourneys be drawn up - especially, a year is essential, and the precise place where the full award will be published must be stated in the announcement.

We permit ourselves a clarificatory observation.

The correct year of a tourney is the year of its closing date, despite the fact that (under the current rules) for FIDE Album purposes the 'year' is the year of publication of an award. This exception is the cause of confusion. A hypothetical example may help: studies entered for a '1991' formal tourney properly qualify for entry to the FIDE Album selection process for the three-year period 1992-94 if the formal tourney award was published only in 1992. In other words, the FIDE Album is an exception to the general rule governing the dating of a composition. The justification is that the position (ie, the diagram) will not have been published during the earlier period. In such cases it is right and proper, when the facts have been established and confirmed, for a '1991' study to be included in the '1992-94' Album. With an informal tourney this consideration does not apply, since the diagram will have been published in the earlier period.

The following studies-related decisions were taken by the PCCC at Turku.

1. The title of International Judge was awarded to Iuri Akobia (Georgia).

2. As a result of inclusions in FIDE Albums the following chess composition titles were awarded:

2.1 International Master (25 Album points): Pal Benko (Hungary and USA); Oleg Pervakov (Russia); Aleksei Sochniev (Russia).

2.2 FIDE Master (12 Album points): Nicolae Micu (Romania); Nikolai Ryabinin (Russia); Vladimir Sychev (Belorussia); Revaz Tavariani (Georgia).

3. For the FIDE Album 1992-1994 the following were provisionally appointed (studies section):

Director: A.J.Roycroft (Great Britain)

Judges: Yochanan Afek (Israel), David Gurgendize (Georgia), Nikolai Kralin (Russia). Reserves: Pauli Perkonaja (Finland), Emilian Dobrescu (Romania). The closing date for entries (in 4 copies clearly diagrammed, complete solution and full publication source within the 3-year period including photocopy with legible date if appropriate, award honour if any, name and address, diagram control) is 1viii96, to the section director. Composers should note that the 1996 PCCC meeting is scheduled for October, and that this is over two months too late for delivery of entries by hand.

(N.Kralin is not a holder of the title of International Judge. However, his formidable judging record and qualifications were presented to the full PCCC and his name was accepted.)

Offers to host the FIDE PCCC in 1997 came from Russia (with St Petersburg the venue) and Mongolia (Ulan-Baatar), with Italy also a possibility.

No PCCC meeting passes without at least one animated discussion. This year's stimulus was a proposal for 'World Champion' titles linked to most points in each FIDE Album section. For some countries this would provide good opportunities for publicity, influence, even personal reward. Some less enthusiastic delegates nevertheless supported the view that some form of recognition would be beneficial, even if 'World Champion' might not be a suitable vehicle. Opponents claimed that there are already too many titles, that arithmetic should not apply to an art form, and that potential consequences of envy, and of pressure to gerry-mander points, are better avoided. It was reported that in Belgium lying naked on the beach is a recognised competitive sport while chess is not. No decision was taken.

Endgames of Iosif Krikheli, edited by Merab Gogberashvili and Iuri Akobia, 48 pages, semi-stiff cover, Tbilisi 1995, in English. Figurine notation with diagrams. Presented in chronological order there are 95 published, and the remarkable number of 43 (forty-three!) previously unpublished, studies in this valuable collection of the work of the versatile Georgian composer who died so unexpectedly in 1988, only four years after being awarded the FIDE title of Grandmaster of Composition. Studies known to be unsound, and versions, have not been included. The preparation work was by GM David Gurgendize from the composer's personal archive. Diagram and source detail appear to be of a high standard of accuracy. There is a theme index. A photograph and biographical note adorn the back cover.

Study Mosaic No.4, by David Gurgenzidze and Iuri Akobia, 32 pages, Tbilisi 1994, in Russian (one article in English). The series devoted to matters pertaining to the study art continues with this excellent number. In seven sections, Gurgenzidze's article illuminates assorted aspects of composing. Akobia presents the first of his reports in English (covering fortress-blockade) on the state of his systematic dissection of the positional draw theme, the formidable topic of the looming 3rd volume in his "World Anthology of Chess Studies", a ground-breaking volume, again with more than four thousand examples (and twice as many diagrams), that is eagerly awaited by study enthusiasts. Mosaic 4 concludes with the recent Georgian awards "Tavariani-70", "B.Gurgenzidze-60", and "Gori-1993", with the blitz composing tourney of Belfort-1994 appended.

Study Mosaic No.6, Tbilisi 1995. This follows the rich pattern of No.4 in the series, beginning with D.Gurgenzidze on study themes extracted from endgame theory. Akobia here covers the perpetual attack (pursuit) type of the positional draw, the next in his advance versions of the introductions to each part the impending 3rd anthology volume. Retrospective Georgian awards included are: "Garedzhi-84" (1984), "Pobeda-40" (1985), "Rustavi-86" (1986), "Golden Fleece-86" (1987), and "Kaissa-86/87", this last having been organised by the Georgian radio and TV newspaper.

Best Studies 2, by David Gurgenzidze, in the semi-stiff cover series edited by Gogberashvili and Akobia, 48 pages, in English. The next 132 studies in this wonderful and very popular selection. Five corrections are published for the first time. A concluding selection is announced.

Chess problems and studies, by V.V.Kuzmichev, Archangel, 76 pages, 1995. In Russian, with a semistiff cover. There is introductory and other matter. 15 studies by the composer are included among 120 of orthodox genres, and there are 62 unpublished positions. Paper, diagrams, source detail and clarity of type - all are admirable.

BELFORT 1994, a supplement to Diagrams-114 and Phenix-31. Dated 1994, and available at Turku in 1995, this illustrated

140-page lemon-covered book is a full account of persons, decisions, events and tourneys experienced at the XXXVII FIDE PCCC meeting - the hot one, as those who were there will recall. Our statement ("less so on the studies front") on p434 of EG/12 was hasty - the studies content at Belfort was exceptionally rich: a thematic blitz composing tourney judged by Iuri Akobia; "Matseshka" tourney judged by Arkady Khait; "Ural Problemist" award by Rummyantsev and Selivanov (see EG/15); the "Study of the Year" for each of the years 1989, 1990 and 1991, as selected and approved by the PCCC Subcommittee for studies (see EG/12); and two lectures, "Systematic and Geometrical Movements" by Oleg Pervakov, and "Zugzwangs for your Pleasure" by John Roycroft.

Announcement

Prospective purchasers of Iuri Akobia's hard cover World Anthology of Chess Studies, Volume III, '4324 studies with positional draw', are invited to write to AJR (price still unclear - send no money). The new volume, in English like the first two, has about 8800 diagrams, 736 pages, 3609 'finale pictures', and copious original expository matter. The sequence of presentation is logical, namely by increasing complexity. We are advised that publication date is September 1995. The edition size is strictly limited.
