

APRIL 1984

TWO BISHOPS AGAINST KNIGHT (continued from EG74) -- by AJR. Ofer Comay (alias Komay or Komai in these and other pages) is a system programmer with the Tel-Aviv University computer installation. He is also a champion solver and first class composer. Unknown to each other, Comay and Ken Thompson were working on the computer solution to the 0023 (GBR class) endgame at roughly the same time. Indeed, so much was their work simultaneous that a letter (dated 24. viii.83 and his first) on this subject was on its way to AJR from Comay at the very time that AJR was in the air travelling to Israel for the 1983 FIDE Commission meeting. EG74 proofs were already with the printer and could not be altered. And that was when and where AJR met Ofer Comay for the first time. So, EG75 is where we do justice to the other researcher. (I understand that Comay could have published his computer results elsewhere, but has not done so).

Now, Comay's results do not tally exactly with Thompson's, but they do confirm that the bishops always win. Comay's maximum is 67, Thompson's is 66. AJR amends both by prefacing each WTM (White-to-Move) series with a single Bl move, but this is unimportant. What is more important is that the positions of maximum solution length are quite different.

It is too early to summarise results. Here we merely present them. But it is important and valuable that two totally independent computer investigations should agree 99%. There can be no residual doubt that two bishops do always win against a single knight, and that for many solutions the play requires an extension to the famous, or infamous, 50-move rule.

Ofer Comay's 12 positions are very closely related, as can be seen by listing them as follows:

- C1: wKa4 wBb5, c1 bKd1 bS (a2, d5, e2, e4)
- C2: wKa4 wBb2 bKc2 bSc3 wB (b7, f3, h1)
- C3: wKd1 wBb2 bKb3 bSc3 wB (b7, h1)
- C4: wKa3 wBf1 bSd2 and either wBc1, bKc3, or wBc3, bKc1
- C5: wKb1 wBb5, c1 bKd1 bSe2

All these positions provide very minor variations of introductory play leading to the same basic temporary incarceration of wK in C5, the one to be considered in detail below. In a C1 position, for example, the play would be 1. Bb2 Kc2 2. Ka3 Sc3 3. B5-Sb1 + 4. Ka2 Sc3 + 5. Ka1.

Now for the variationless play from C5, as originally sent to AJR, who has added just the "Kling and Horwitz" comments.

It is the hardest to make sense of,
since it conceals an as yet unknown
number of strategic and tactical patterns which we humans will have to work on (assisted by conversational tools enabling us to have a 'dialogue' with the data base). For the time being we can say only that it is "phase four", in which bK and bS are forced to the edge of the board but prevented from re-adopting a Kling and Horwitz position. The long succession of 'unique' moves is quite extraordinary -- moves 32 to 40 and moves 41 to 45 -- even making allowance for the fact that 'unique' does not mean unique in the study sense of 'only move to win', but in the computer sense of 'only move to secure the quickest win'.

Naturally, the final note always must include every legal move.

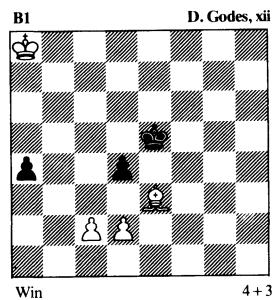

P.S. We have not heard the last of GBR class 0023, but we must give it a rest for a while.

Mr Whitworth's article was of great interest to me. Personally I am against using a piece for no other purpose than to sacrifice itself. But even if one accepts this type of introductory play it may be possible to do it better. Here are two attempts. In B2 1. Sc6 is more spectacular, exposing wK to a possible check on a1.

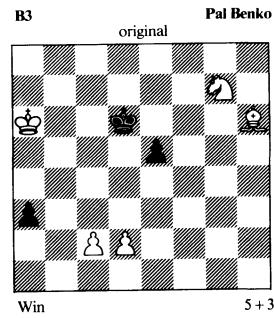

KUBBEL AGAIN!

EG69, p. 70, adaptation by Godes of a Kubbel classic: IGM Pal Benko (USA) follows the composer's solution (B1) 1. Bh6 Ke4 2. d3+ Kf3 3.

Kb7 a3 4. Bc1 but then diverges with 4. ..., a2 to draw, 5. Bb2 Ke3 followed by 6. ..., Kd2. Benko's next point: "Actually the win is more simple: 1. Bh6 Ke4 2. Bf8 (despite the original note giving this move a '?') 2. ..., Kf3 3. e4 and W wins after either 3. ..., dc 4. dc Ke4 5. c4, or 3. ..., Ke2 4. Bb4 Kd3 5. c5."

In addition there is the try 1. e4+? Kxc4. (1. ..., dc? 2. dc Ke4 3. Bc1 wins, 3. ..., a2 4. Bb2, or 3. ..., Kb3 4. Bxa3. Or 1. ..., Ke4 2. Sc6 a2 3. d3+.) 2. d3+ Kxd3 3. Sc6 Ke4 4. Bg7 d3 5. Se5+ Kc3 draws. In B2, however, wS moves once only, so let us look at B3 (wK could be on a8 also). 1. Sf5+ Ke6. Or 1. ..., Kd5 2.

Se3+ and c3. 2. Sd4+ ed 3. Bg7 and so on. The wS moves are incorporated into the play and by changing the P-structure the solution is better concealed. In fact I agree with Tavariani's suggestion to leave off wS. It is a plus that the position becomes a miniature but the W1 and W3 versions are dull. I would like to offer B4 as perhaps the best setting as a miniature. 1. d3. A surprise. W makes no attempt to stop aP. 1. Bh4? d3 (or Kc4; first) 2. c3 Kc4 3. Kb7 a4 4.

Be7 Kb3 5. Kb6 Kc2 draws (just). 1. ..., a4 2. Bh4 Ke6 3. Bg5 (for Bc1-b2) and so on. This takes no credit from Kubbel, who after all introduced the theme. My examples may help the cause of true artistry by developing a more sophisticated taste in lovers of the endgame."

Second World Chess Compositions Tournament (2. WCCT).

There was one studies theme set for this 10-section team event. Set theme: In the main line (or variation or try, and by W or B1) a promotion to Q creates instant stalemate. Hillel Aloni (Israel) precedes his award with the following words (here and there paraphrased). "It was a great honour for me and my small country to be assigned the responsibility of choosing the theme and judging the Endgames section of the Second WCCT. It seems that the trust placed in us can be ascribed to the outstanding development of Israeli chess study composition.

"The WCCT was announced as a 'thematic tourney', and I would like to clarify here, in a few words, my personal attitude to this requirement in the specific case of studies. It seems to me that in contrast to problems, where there is short-range action and therefore the realisation of the theme becomes a main objective, the long and varied play which characterises endings in general renders such a requirement rather marginal, and more emphasis should be given to the value of the ending as a (whole) composition.

The thematic limitation serves only as a kind of entrance permit to the special framework of the tourney in question, and this is the only way it differs from the 'classical' demand of a 'free theme'.

"From this standpoint, then, the composer who cleverly presents a multiplication of the theme, but with poor play, is not assured of success in the tourney, while on the other hand a composer who presents only a minimal execution of the theme, but manages to create around it original and valuable chess content, may well reap rich reward.

"Before turning to a detailed review of the compositions participating in the tourney it is my pleasant duty to thank the people who assisted me in this difficult but rewarding task: first and foremost Dr. J. Niemann (BRD) for his direction of the tourney; Mr. J.R. Harman (UK) who, in spite of severe illness (the very serious Clo-ward's operation was only one of Richard's ordeals. He is now having to learn to walk -- for the fourth time in his life. (AJR)) greatly contributed towards the testing of originality; Mr. A. Ettinger (Istael) for translating the award into English; and, last but not least, Mr. D. Lucas (Israel) for his competent translations from German. I am grateful to all.

"31 competing compositions were submitted for adjudication. Most of them represent an a posteriori justification of my attitude, as expressed in the foregoing, towards the importance of thematic content, insofar a they restricted themselves to a limited realisation of the thematic requirement, concentrating on the creation of as excellent by-play as possible. In this regard I felt disappointed in the following respects:

"a) our choice of theme was based on the great popularity it has enjoyed since endgame composition began, and on the possibilities which it opens up for imaginative composers. However, in the present case composers did not live up to expectation, since apart from a number of excellent compositions which hinted at the unfathomable possibilities inherent in the theme most of them did not rise above the routine which prevails in many ordinary tournaments today.

"b) The epidemic of 'deficiencies' which has been afflicting the best tournaments in recent years (as a reminder, consider the 1972-75 WCCT), beyond question pointing to a lack of care on the part of composers and judges alike, has not spared the current WCCT, in spite of the long time available to competing countries, which ought to have enabled them to check and analyse their entries thoroughly. No fewer than 12 (almost 40%) of the submitted entries, including some of the very best, had to be disqualified due to defects both apparent and concealed, even before the test for originality and evaluation of the study as a composition. This is definitely a warning sign, and unless a marked improvement occurs in the near future the whole field of endgame composition is in danger of losing most of its credibility".

"c) In a few cases there was an evident desire merely to win ranking points, without any real effort to create something of value, the composers contenting themselves with sloppy work barely satisfying the thematic demand; eg they 'dressed up' a well known element with banal by-play inferior even to that of its predecessors. In these cases I was in a dilemma to decide whether to include such efforts in the award at all. I think that my decisions will not encourage similar attempts in future..."

"In checking the correctness of participating entries I had to examine, in a number of instances, some delicate aspects of endgame theory, including one known as fairly innovative (sic). Luckily I did not have to resolve problems requiring an exhaustive research of the authorities, and the questionable positions could easily be evaluated.

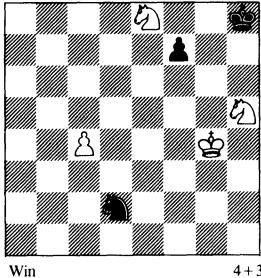

"Finally, a few words regarding the numerous objections and comments by the participating countries: the eagerness to expose errors and anticipations in competing entries is of course legitimate, and paradoxically even constructive, as it enhances the credibility of chess compositions. But this does not mean that such criticism is not itself subject to considerations of credibility. In some cases a questionable or even totally incorrect analysis was given in order to invalidate a composer's solution (or maybe to trip the judge up)? So more care seems to be indicated.

"After checking the 31 entries for correctness and originality I decided to include in the final award only 17 of them..."

The above extensive extract is reproduced, with full acknowledgement to the West German "Die Schwalbe" fairy chess magazine and its remarkable band of workers (Peter Kniest, Bernd Ellinghoven, Dr. J. Niemann) who produced the whole 2. WCCT award booklet, which otherwise would not have appeared, in which event the tournament itself would not have taken place. (Result: 1st Place: USSR; 2nd: Israel; 3rd: USA; 4th: Czechoslovakia. 29 countries competed).

"Gruziya-60"
Award: Shakhmatny Tbilisi, xii.82

Draw 3 + 4

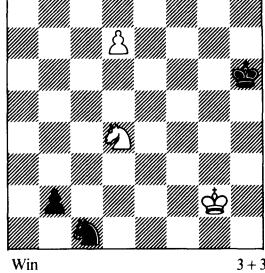

No. 5054: G. Nadareishvili (Tbilisi). This important tourney is a text-book example of the very real difficulty there is in identifying a tourney. The award was published in "Tbilisi Chess" (Russian title 'Shakhmatny Tbilisi'), described as "a special bulletin of the Committee for Physical Culture and Sport of the Council ('soviet') of Ministers of the Georgian ('Gruzian') Republic and of the Georgian Chess Federation". The award takes up 3 pages of the 8-page bulletin and is headed "'Gruziya-60'" Tourney, but the sub-heading (take another deep breath) reads, in translation: "provisional award in the All-Union tourney for study composition -- 'Gruziya-60', organised by the organ of the TsK (ie, Central Committee) of the Georgian 'Komparty' (ie, the Communist Party), of the Supreme Soviet and Council of Ministers of the Georgian Republic, namely 'Komunisti', in celebration of 60 years of the Georgian Komparty and the inauguration of the Georgian SSR". Probably everyone will be happy to call the tourney "Gruziya-60". The judges were Vazha Neidze and Revaz Tavariani, both of Tbilisi. There were approximately 150 entries.

1. Sf5+. 1. Rb1? fails to 1. ..., f1Q+ and either 2. Rx1 Sc1+, or 2. Kxf1 Sd2+, with 3. Sxb2, winning. 1., Ke6 2. Rb1 f1Q+ 3. Rxf1 Sc1+ 4. Kd2 b1Q 5. Sd4+. No. 5089: E. Chumburidze. This competition of the Georgian newspaper 'Soplis Tskhovreba' in the Georgian tongue (= Country Life, but bearing zero relationship to the glossy British journal of the same name!) was for non-town composers. It was even the 5th such tourney. The first was in 1964, and subsequent dates were: 1968, 1972, 1976 and 1980. It is not clear how many of these were for studies. The present tourney was judged by David Gurgenidze, himself a confirmed country-man and current USSR champion for studies. 52 composers entered 86 compositions, and the preliminary award appeared in 'Soplis Tskhovreba' on 25.xii.81. This is the final award. The composer of the 1st Prize-winning study comes from the village of Zeda Simoneti, Terholsky Raion (= local district, smaller than 'oblast' or 'krai') in the Georgian SSR.
